

Not Real, But Really Important

The young, 10 year old boy gripped the voting ballot with both hands and shook his head from side to side. Standing next to him at Perkasio Borough Hall on Election Day was a friend also waiting to cast his Kids Voting ballot.

"I can't believe we get to do this," the first boy remarked.

"Yea. We're voting. It doesn't really count, but it's important," the second boy replied.

No, it didn't count. But it was important. Exposing America's youth to the democratic process always is. And that's what Kids Voting is all about. The national, non-partisan program gives students from kindergarten through grade 12 an authentic voting experience at actual precincts while their parents cast their votes in the real election.

Kids Voting Makes a Difference

- Kids Voting students are more likely to vote when they turn 18.
- The adult voter turnout in Kids Voting communities is higher.
- 52,000 students in Bucks/Montgomery Counties voted in 2008
- 1,500 volunteers served as K V "election officials" at hundreds of sites.
